The state of North Dakota is a sunshine state because it has assets above its outstanding bills. The State has a $4.1 billion financial surplus.

Each Taxpayer's Share of This Financial Surplus is $16,100

Unlike most states, North Dakota has the money need to fund State employees’ retirement benefits and other outstanding bills. North Dakota is in good financial shape because the legislators and governors have only promised citizens and employees what they can afford to deliver.

Truth in Accounting’s detailed analysis discovered a total of $479.8 million of retirement benefits have been promised but not funded. Because of the confusing way the State does its accounting, a net retirement asset of $602,000 is reported on ‘s balance sheet.

The Institute for Truth in Accounting is committed to compelling governments to provide citizens with truthful and transparent financial information.

We call on governments to truthfully balance their budgets by including all real and certain expenses when incurred not when paid.

A transparent budget process would provide citizens with the information they need to be knowledgeable participants in their state government.

To be knowledgeable participants in their State government, citizens need to be provided with truthful and transparent financial information.

The State has accumulated bonds of $1.6 billion and other liabilities of $6.7 billion. The calculation of assets available to pay bills does not include capital assets, so $431.1 million of related debt is removed from the calculation of State Bills.

The state of North Dakota has $19.6 billion in assets, but most of these assets are not available to pay State bills.

The $3.1 billion of capital assets, such as roads, buildings, and land should not be sold to pay bills. The use of $4 billion of the assets is restricted by law or contract.

That leaves $12.5 billion of State's assets available to pay $8.4 billion of bills as they come due.

North Dakota's elected officials seem to promise only the amount of benefits they can afford to pay.
